PREFACE

THE object of the present work is to furnish stenographic forms for the words of the English language, written in accordance with the rules of Pitman's Shorthand, and with the most facile outlines that appear practicable. Every writer of the system is aware that the rules which render possible a far greater measure of simple and systematized abbreviation than is attainable by any other stenographic method, also admit, in many instances, of a certain freedom of choice in the use of these abbreviations. The Shorthand Dictionary provides for those who use the system forms which experience has shown can be recommended as standard outlines for general adoption. Hence the obvious importance and utility of the work as a book of reference for teachers, students, and practitioners.

The shorthand characters given in this Dictionary are in the fully vocalized or Corresponding Style. But all the logograms and contracted words are included in the body of the work, the word "or" indicating their introduction. A few other abbreviated forms which do not appear in the instruction books, but have long been employed in the system, are indicated in the same way. Complete lists of all the Grammalogues and Contracted Words given in the text-books will be found also at the end of the Dictionary. The employment of wt for many of the terminations -wart or -wort, as in stalwart, quillwort, may be noted here. In regard to the suffix -ing and the use of the monosyllabic and disyllabic diphthongal signs, it should be observed that while first and second-place vowels may be safely used in vocalizing words like "gnawing," "saying," etc., it is absolutely necessary that third-place diphthongs should be employed in such words as "sallying," "wooing," etc., for the adequate representation of the vowel sounds. Throughout the Dictionary outlines for words of the character last named have been vocalized with the diphthongal signs. In certain instances, as in the outline adopted to differentiate pure from poor, it has been considered necessary to depart from the strict rules of the system; an explanation of these outlines will be found in the "Reporter's Assistant."

The first Dictionary of stenographic outlines ever published in connection with Pitman's Shorthand, was produced from lithographic transfers written by the Inventor of Phonography in the year 1846, and had the following title : "A Phonographic Dictionary of the English Language ; containing the most usual words to the number of Twelve Thousand. By Isaac Pitman." In succeeding years improved editions of the work written by the same hand were produced by the lithographic process ; but in 1878, with the title of "A Phonetic Shorthand and Pronouncing Dictionary of the English Language," the Inventor of Phonography produced a Dictionary of larger size, and for the first time the shorthand characters were engraved on metal blocks. Besides the shorthand outline, this edition gave the pronunciation of each word in phonetic printing, and also its definition. The work contained twenty-six thousand shorthand forms. In subsequent editions the phonotypic pronunciations and the definitions were discarded, and the Dictionary was issued with merely the common longhand spelling of the words after the shorthand outlines ; while, from time to time, considerable additions were made to the vocabulary.

In the present New Edition, the shorthand characters have been newly engraved throughout by the typographic etching process, and the longhand portion has been entirely re-set from new type. The number of words has been increased to sixty-two thousand. It will be noted that in the letterpress portion capitals are only employed initially where such is the ordinary usage, as in the case of proper names and terms. In botanical, zoological, and similar scientific terms, the names of genera are capitalized ; with species bearing the same name a capital would not, of course, be used. For example, Ranunculus, the genus, but ranunculus, a plant of this genus.

The Publishers tender their hearty thanks to the large number of correspondents who have contributed suggestions with a view to ensuring the greater accuracy and completeness of the Dictionary.

Pitman's Shorthand Dictionary.
